

The main thing you need to know about your redesigned SAT scores is that they're more detailed and more holistic than ever before. While the redesigned SAT will be scored out of 1600, versus 2400 for the current SAT, there will be new subscores and cross-section scores to consider as you evaluate your performance. Let's take a look at what we're working with.

Your two cross-test scores, each out of 40 points, demonstrate capabilities that apply to both Reading and Writing and Math. The scores are based on your performance answering questions that have Science or History/Social Studies contexts.

Your SAT subscores show mastery of topics within Reading and Writing & Language, Writing & Language alone, and Math alone. These topics are outlined and covered in Khan Academy's SAT prep program.

The Essay is optional in the redesigned SAT and will not be factored into your overall SAT score. The Essay scores will be shown separately on the report and are based on three criteria.

Your total score is your overall score and is the combination of your section scores (see below). The highest composite score for the redesigned SAT is 800+800, or 1600.

Your section scores are the individual scores for the two main “parts” of the SAT: Reading/Writing and Math. Each of these is scored out of 800, and they are added together to get your overall score.

Your test scores break out the Reading/Writing section into Reading and Writing & Language and give you scores out of 40 points as well as a math test score out of 40 points. These are the basis for your section scores, and therefore your overall SAT score.

Essay

- » Reading 2–8*
- » Analysis 2–8*
- » Writing 2–8*

* Combined score of two raters, each scoring on a 1–4 scale